Faculty participate in academic governance through “collegiality” – a duty and a right

Collegial Management, or Collegial Authority, is the influence and involvement faculty members have in the decisions and administration of our institution. Faculty have input on decisions related to:

- hiring and selection of new faculty and administrators;
- successful completion of probation for new faculty;
- student appeals and entrance;
- curriculum development;
- course offerings;
- individual and department work assignments;
- peer reviews;
- election of coordinators and chairs;
- allocation of pro. dev't resources.

(Adapted from Federation of Post Secondary Educators (FPSE), 2014.

Collegiality is a fundamental condition of academic work.
